

Operational buyer (Repairs)

Hoofddorp

The role

The Operational Buyer is responsible for acquiring materials for the manufacturing of new parts and/or subcontracting (repairs) at vendors. The goal is to get the orders delivered on time, at a competitive price. In addition, providing quotations, active supplier and orderbook management is part of the responsibilities. The buyer provides regular updates to the stakeholders about the order status. The buyer will advise the organization about the different solutions to meet the customer requirements. All these activities help to contribute, cost reductions, process improvements and on time delivery. When deliveries cannot be made on time, you will propose alternative solutions in order to still meet the requested service levels.

The department

The Supply Chain Management department supports the Material Services and Component Services organization. Within Supply Chain there are multiple teams of Operational Buyers supporting the different departments. These teams each focus on a specific segment of the Supply Chain defined by the product segment, type of order and supplier. The Operational Buyer is the link between the procurement department and the customer support representatives and responsible for the order flow for all products and services of Fokker Services (Spares, exchanges and repairs). Through continuous improvement on processes and services, all departments work together and strive to guarantee the ultimate Customer experience.
